LITTLE WILLIE.

Some have thought that in one day's time, in our being,
Redeemed,
God is nearer little children than their parents ever know,
And that if you have sharply better things than you can teach,
And a sort of mystic wisdom trickle through their careless speech.

How it is I cannot answer; but I knew a little child Who, among the thyme, and roses, and the bees, was running wild—

And he came one summer evening, with his ringlets
over his eyes,
And his hat was torn to pieces, chattering bees and butterflies.

"Now I'll go to bed, dear mother, for I'm very tired of play!"

And he said his "Now I'll go to bed," in a kind of gentle-way;

And he drank the cooling water from his little children's cup,

And said, gaily, "When it's morning, will the angels take me up?"

There he lies, how sweet and peaceful; and his breathing comes and goes—

Like a reaper moving softly, and his cheek is like a rose,
But his mother leaned to listen if his breathing could be heard—

"O!" she murmured, "if the angels took my darling at his word!"

Night within its folding mantle hushes sleepers both beautified.

And within its soft embraces rest the mother and the child.

Up she awoke from her dozing, for a sound had struck her ear—

And it comes from little Willie, lying on his tombs near.

Up she springeth, for it strikes upon her troubled ear again.

And he breathes in louder sighs, travels from his lungs
in pain,

And his eyes are white upward of some lace border'd the room.

And the darkness of the spider from his cheek had closed the dome.

Never more his "Now I'll go to bed" will be said from mother's knee,

Never more among the clover will he close the humble bee,

Through the night she watched her darling, now despairing, now in hope,

And about the break of morning did the angels take him up—New Haven Palladium.

COUSIN DEBORAH'S LEGACY.

Cousin Deborah was an old, unmarried lady, who had no other property than a moderate life annuity. The furniture of the house was faded and antique; the linen was well darned; the plate was scanty, and worn thin with use and frequent scouring; the books were few and in no very good condition. She had no jewelry or trinkets; her days were passed in a dreary state of tranquility, stitching, aching forever, with her beloved huge work-box at her elbow. That wanted nothing, for it was abundantly fitted up with worsted, cotton, tapes, buttons, bunting, needles, and such a multiplicity of odds and ends, that to enumerate them would be a tedious task.

Cousin Deborah particularly prided herself on darning; carpets, house linen, stockings, all bore unequalled testimony to this branch of industry. Holes and thin places were healed with delight by her; and it was whispered—but that might be a mere matter of scandal—that she even went so far as to cut holes in her best table-cloth, for the purpose of exercising her ingenuity in repairing the fractures. Be that as it may, the work-box was as much a companion to her as dogs and cats are to many other single ladies. She was lost without it; her conversation turned on the subject of thread and needle cases; and never was darning cotton more scientifically rolled into neat balls, than by the taper fingers of cousin Deborah.

The contents of that wonderful work-box would have furnished a small shop. As a child, I always regarded it with a species of awe and veneration; and without daring to lay a finger on the treasure it contained, my prying eyes greedily devoured its mysteries, when the rat-edged revealed its mosaics of cotton and forests of pins and needles. And I have no doubt that cousin Deborah first regarded me with favor in consequence of being raised by my mother to give me a lesson in darning—a most necessary accomplishment in our family, as I was the eldest of many brothers and sisters; and, though very happy among ourselves, the circumstances of our dear parents rendered the strictest industry and frugality absolutely indispensable in order to make both ends meet.

She was proud of me, on the whole, as a pupil, though she sometimes had occasion to reprove me for idleness and skipping studies; but between us it is impossible to say how many pairs of stockings we made in the course of a year. We resided near our cousin Deborah; and many a time I was invited to take tea with her, and bring my book in hand as a matter of course, and sit with her long hours without speaking, intent on our needles, the silence unbroken, save by the ticking of the eight day clock.

I sometimes felt it very dull work, I confess

Not so with cousin Deborah. She needed no other society than that of her work-box, and I do not believe that she loved any human being so well. Her whole heart was in it; and the attachment she exhibited toward me, as she went to and fro to and fro, and encouraged by my mutual zeal in performing tasks of needlework. Not that I shamed in her devotion; I was gratified by a sense of duty alone, and world for nothing, could I have done so, conscientiously, but by dancing and laughing, with company of my own age. But ply the needle I did, and so did cousin Deborah; and we two became, with the huge work-box between us, quite a pair of individualized humor, and is half-possible for Justice to befriend them. They are great at the City Music Store 82 Thames Street, for only 10 cents each.

GEN. MCNEIL.

The action of this General in executing guerrillas as a retaliatory measure for the abduction and murder of a Union man named Allsman, has come to be an important affair in consequence of the subsequent retaliatory measures which the rebels have inaugurated, and are still practising, and which have changed the whole proceedings usually had in a state of war concerning the exchange and treatment of prisoners of war. But there is no doubt that Gen. McNeil was right, and acted with a full knowledge and proper judgment in the premises. This being so, it is certainly remarkable to see the New York Times, with its antecedents apologizing to the English Press in the following words. It quotes from the London Star, acknowledging the justice of its protest, and then adds:

"The Star will be glad to learn that McNeil the actor in this horrid tragedy, is not an officer of the national army, nor has he any connection with the government of the United States. He belongs to the 'Home Guard' of the State of Missouri, an organization which exists solely under State authority, for local defence against lawless marauders in the rebel service, and is outside the control of the national government. The whole transaction had no legitimate connection with the war between the United States and the rebel Confederacy. It was an affair between lawless, unrecognized and unauthorised parties on both sides. The rebel Potter, who commanded the force suspected of having murdered Allsman, was chief of a guerrilla band, and McNeil commanded a body of men very similar in its organization and in the objects it was intended to accomplish."

Now this is astonishingly untrue and erroneous as the statement of any American paper, and particularly of any intelligent one.

These troops are as much under the control of the Federal Government as any in the field. Every Regimental Quartermaster or Commisary of the Missouri State Militia reports to Washington—the only difference between these Missouri troops and others being that "their field of operations shall be the State of Missouri or its related vicinage."

Their organization, of course has particular reference to the exigencies of the particular kind of service required in the State of Missouri, and is made up accordingly. Gen. McNeil did not act without authority, as will be seen from the following orders:

"Headquarters Dept. Mississippi, St. Louis, March 3, 1862.

General Orders, No. 2.

Gen. H. Evidence has been received at these Headquarters, that Maj.-Gen. Sterling Price has issued commissions or licenses to certain bands in this State, authorizing them to raise guerrilla forces for the purpose of plunder and marauding. Gen. Price might to know that such a course is contrary to the rules of civilized warfare, and that every man who enlists in such an organization, forfeits his life and becomes an outlaw. All persons are hereby warned that if they join any guerrilla band they will not, if captured, be treated as prisoners of war, but will be hung as robbers and murderers. Their lives shall alone for the security of their General.

By command of Maj.-Gen. Halleck,

N. H. McEvoy, A. A. G."

Of the same tenor are Gen. Orders No. 13 and 32, by Gen. Halleck, and General Order No. 18, by Gen. Schenck, the spirit of which is contained in the following extract:

"The utmost vigilance and energy are enjoined upon all the troops of the State in hunting down and destroying these robbers and assassins. When caught in arms, engaged in this unlawful warfare, they will be shot down upon the spot."

The men executed by order of Gen. McNeil came under the peculiar class above mentioned. They were assassins, and nothing short of such stringent measures could possibly bear in the least salutary manner upon these heartless cut-throats. It was a necessity, forced upon us which could not be avoided with safety to life or property. Many instances might be given of corroborative facts, but we spare for them. We close our article, however, with the following from the Missouri correspondent of the Boston Watchman & Register. After giving an account of the barbarous doings of the guerrillas, he adds:

"It would be easy to multiply similar descriptive details without limit; but this single illustrative case may be taken as a fair exhibition of the interlacing, active and convincing violence, murder and robbery everywhere prevalent over the State, and a decisive indication of the necessity of vigorous, prompt and severe measures as the only policy of wisdom or safety. This point has been ample verified, that stern severity, in these cases, is the greatest mercy—last spring, at the beginning of the great guerrilla uprising of this year, we had a small garnison of newly-raised troops at Shellyville, in the interior of the State. While a small party of soldiers and citizens were taking supplies from the railroad, eight miles distant, they were fired upon by lurking rebel assassins, and some of both citizens and soldiers were killed."

The officer in command of the post, a bold, energetic man, promptly ordered a guerrilla party taken out and shot in retaliation, and informed the rebel citizens that their turn would come next. From that hour guerrilla murderers had great respect for loyal lives in the region of Shellyville. The same effect has followed the military execution in Palmyra; and such will continue to be the result unless the moral effect of that transaction shall be weakened by the stupid and blundering judgments of an un-informed press, ignorant of all the circumstances surrounding and necessitating the case. Prompt and hard retributive blows are the only guarantees of security to life and property. Already a fat sentimental and ill-judged and misdirected lenity has cost multitudes of lives and millions of property. It is time that more effective and salutary measures prevail."

All this is sufficient to show plainly that the little lady, Mrs. Lovina Warren, soon to be joined for life. It was love at first sight. Barbara prevailed on Miss Warren to exhibit at the Museum before taking her trip to Europe, and the General, attracted with the rest of the world to see her, was conquered. He who had stood the assaults of scores of women, who admired his figure—three hundred thousand—was led a willing captive now. And his intended is charming to other eyes than his. The Museum is crowded daily and nightly to see her, and scores of men are in love with her. For she is the most graceful, pretty, little lady alive, and converses, sings, dances with a charm which fairly captivates susceptible hearts. It is no wonder gallant Tom was caught. Miss Warren is in capital health and spirits, and entertains her visitors with them. The wedding is to come on the tenth of next month, and promises to be a splendid and unique affair. The couple are to visit Europe, and return to live in the General's mansion at Bridgeport. A joyous married life to them!

Devon & Sons.—The flags of the ships Constitution and Santa were displayed at half mast this morning out of respect to the memory of Midshipman Smith of Philadelphia who last night breathed his last at the Hospital on Goat Island. This young man was the grandson of Com. Foxwell Parker, and has for several days been exceedingly ill with Typhoid fever; all efforts of medical skill and kind and efficient attendance having proved unavailing. He is mourned by all his companions and teachers with whom he was a general favorite. During the sojourn of the Naval Academy in this city we have, until this time been spared the mournful task of recording the death of a midshipman and we trust the time is far distant when we shall again be obliged to perform this journalistic duty.

Our Army Correspondence.

From Beaufort's Headquarters.

HEADQUARTERS, Army of the Potomac, (Opposite Frederickburg, Va.) January 11th, 1863.

Mr. Editor.—Here am at the Headquarters of the grand Army of the Potomac; it is a grand Army indeed, composed of more than one hundred thousand men. My old friend Gen. Burnside received me most kindly, and gave me a tent next to his own. His camp covers a space of four miles, and his pickets extends over a distance of 22 miles. I have been all through the camp, and never witnessed such a scene before. Our New- port men in camp are all well and were very glad to see me; at a general thing they are all comfortably situated; some of the 12th Regiment are anything but comfortable,—the fault of this is in Washington; things never will be right in this respect, until there is a change in the Cabinet.

The men are anxious for a fight; they are warmly attached to Gen. Burnside, and proud to be under his command. The most active preparations are being made for an early movement against the enemy. Fredericksburg, which can be as distinctly seen from here, as Fort Walcott from Newport, is a desolated looking place; churches, private residences, &c., are torn and pattered in a terrible manner, I wish that I had time to give you a full description of all that I have seen in the grand Army of the Potomac,—but I have not time, as an ambulance is waiting to take me on another adventure to the extreme end of the camp, where I expect to witness some novel sight. I have seen and know more than I can easily relate. You may expect to here of a movement of the grand Army of the Potomac at any moment. In great haste,

Yours very truly,

W. H. C.

DR. SWEET'S

Infallible Liniment.

GREAT EXTERNAL REMEDY.

For Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Lameness, Sciatica, Neuralgia, and certain Harness or Saddle Galls, Sciatic and Rupture, &c., it will relieve speedy. Spasms and Rheumatism may be easily relieved and cured in their incipient stages, but continued evils are beyond the possibility of a cure. No other kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always cure the lameness, and enable the horse to run with comparative ease.

Any horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for the use of the first-mentioned cases will effectively prevent those formidable diseases, and to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

MOST DESIRABLE WORK OF THE KIND,

FOR CHOIR, SINGING- SCHOOL, MUSICAL CONVENTION

and the Home-Circle,

or CHORAL SOCIETY.

This Book is not one of a series of Triennial publications made to supply a market artificially created, but is the embodiment of the best fruits of the labor of its author, for the better arrangement and composition during a period of thirty years' devotion to Sacred Music.

Special attention is directed to the fact that this book is printed in large, clear type, the object being to so how it can be easily crowded into it, and with it could be done. We have, therefore, a large, clear, open page, with but one part on a staff, except in a few standard, well-known tunes selected for congregational use.

Price $1. Single, 80 per dozen.

Specimen copy sent by mail, postpaid, on receipt of price.

Specimen Pages sent free upon application.

WING'S FARINA CRACKERS.—There are persons of high respectability who make a variety of Crackers bearing different names, such as Boston,

Congers, Soda, &c., which are excellent of their kinds,

but as there are no other crackers manufactured in the United States, containing the peculiar qualities of Wing's, many of these persons purchase Wing's Crackers

in order to supply their customers with the true

Wing's Crackers.

TO HORSE OWNERS.

Dr. Sweet's Infallible Liniment

FOR HORSES

Is unrivaled, by any, and in all cases of lameness, arising from Sprain, Fracture or Wrenching, its effect is miraculous, Harness or Saddle Galls, Sciatic, Neuralgia, Rupture, &c., it will relieve speedy. Spasms and Rheumatism may be easily relieved and cured in their incipient stages, but continued evils are beyond the possibility of a cure. No other kind, however, is so desperate or hopeless but it may be alleviated

by this Liniment, and its faithful application will always cure the lameness, and enable the horse to run with comparative ease.

Any horse owner should have this remedy at hand, for the use of the first-mentioned cases will effectively prevent those formidable diseases, and to which all horses are liable, and which render so many otherwise valuable horses nearly worthless.

See advertisement.
